

Addi

Shelter Favorite – $67 Adoption Fee

Weeks before coming into our care, Addi sustained an injury to her left front leg that left it badly wounded, most likely the result of being hit and drug by a car. We tried hard to save her leg, and the tissue healed well over a 10day period, but unfortunately, the nerve damage she sustained when the original injury occurred was too extensive and the choice had to be made of whether to save her life. And so, thanks to the generosity of a special surgeon, Addi's leg was removed and she is currently healing in a foster home until she is ready for adoption. Addi is resilient, as are most dogs, and she had adjusted nicely to life with only three legs. She gets along well, and never misses the opportunity to jump up and hug a person with her remaining front leg. Addi is crate trained (but does not need to be), housebroken, good with other dogs, indifferent to cats, and 100% lovebug. Addi is definitely a people-oriented dog, so being an only dog child would be fine with her as well.
